HOWARD KING

Why he matters: King once compared litigation to "bare-knuckle fighting." He certainly took the gloves off this year, slamming Marvin Gaye's family when they complained that Robin Thicke's hit "Blurred Lines" sounded a bit too much like "Got to Give it Up." He also mounted a spirited defense of client M.I.A. when the NFL complained about the artist's middle-finger salute during the Super Bowl halftime show.

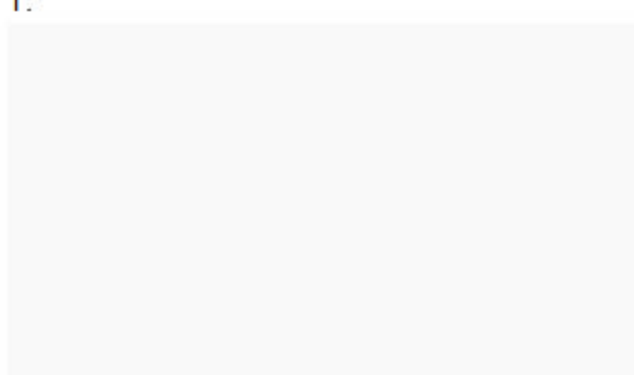

Biggest Hollywood tantrum he's witnessed: King was recently in a courtroom when he got struck ... hit course in the face by a member of the opposing party. The judge flat to chambers
